Developing Your Team

Chief audit executives (CAEs) identified areas in which their teams needed training as part of The IIA’s 2017 Pulse of Internal Audit survey. The top-rated training need areas included:

Data Mining and Analytics

67%

The volume and complexity of transactions in today’s world require internal auditors to examine extensive amounts of data.

Cybersecurity and Privacy

52%

Growing concerns about cyber-attacks make cybersecurity a top concern for audit committees and board members.

Analytical/Critical Thinking

49%

Analytical and critical thinking skills allow internal auditors to effectively apply their technical knowledge.

Communication Skills

45%

Interpersonal, listening, and presentation skills allow internal auditors to effectively address, influence, and persuade stakeholders.

Let the Experts Come to You

The IIA is the leading authority on the principles and practices of internal auditing. And your team can benefit from this experience through flexible and cost-effective on-site training. IIA On-site Group Training offers:

- Customized content based on your specific organizational and training needs.
- Expert instruction from trained facilitators.
- Consistent learning experiences that include interactive classroom sessions, online access for remote staff, or any combination of both.

Maximize Productivity and Collaboration

IIA On-site Group Training helps you control training costs and maintain your staff’s productivity by eliminating travel and reducing downtime. On-site Group Training also allows other staff to contribute to the training process.

“One of the main benefits to bringing the training onsite was that senior leaders were able to come in and observe and listen to both the classroom instruction and the group breakout discussions. Being able to engage in thought-provoking dialogue where everyone's opinion is respected helps develop essential critical thinking skills.”

Designed for Your Needs

Your training program will be developed by a dedicated team consultant based on your organization, your team’s needs, and critical learning objectives. Your consultant will:

- Conduct a detailed needs analysis to understand your challenges.
- Match your team with a skilled facilitator who specializes in the specific training you need.
- Collaborate with IIA instructional designers and your facilitator to create a proposed training outline.
