Leadership Series III: Achieving Optimal Culture

About This Course

Course Description
Driving a strategy that requires change in human behavior may be the most difficult challenge a leader can face. What do top leaders do to gain voluntary contributions of discretionary performance from those they lead to define, direct, and shape an optimal culture? This third and final session of this leadership series will provide you with a number of key takeaways.

Who will benefit from this course?
This course will benefit internal audit practitioners who want to develop into well-rounded leaders, and it is applicable for any industry. The key topics cater to the growing needs that are a result of increased auditor involvement in organizations worldwide and industrywide. The course identifies the dynamics of leadership styles, effective communication, productive relationship management, quality decision-making, and more.

Course Objectives
- Create shifts in the way employees think and act so that your desired culture will flourish, and heighten organizational performance.
- Understand how to identify the root cause of undesired cultural beliefs and actions, and how to infuse desired beliefs and actions.
- Develop a culture where employees ‘bring more of themselves’ to the workplace — triggering innovation, creativity, and passion.
- Acquire principles and tools to help you clearly define, and then establish your optimal culture.
